

The Generation PRX Youth Editorial Board

What it is:

The Generation PRX Youth Editorial Board (EB) makes sure that youth pieces on PRX are recognized, reviewed, and featured. The Youth EB is a rotating group of youth producers from around the country who are trained to listen to pieces, write reviews and select their favorites. The Youth EB helps youth producers improve their work and gets youth voices heard.

Responsibilities:

The Youth EB consists of three members who each come from a different youth radio group. Each member:

- Sits on the Youth EB for three months
- Receives training on review writing (including a training pack and phone support). Members work with Generation PRX coordinators to write their first review, and then post reviews directly to the site
- Writes one review of a youth-produced piece each week (four per month)
- Chooses a favorite piece each month to feature on the Generation PRX and nominate for inclusion in YouthCast, the Generation PRX podcast on alt.NPR

What you give:

Being on the Youth EB is a commitment, but not one that should take up a lot of your time. Three qualities make the job easiest:

1. Initiative: Does this sound fun? Is it something you'd be excited to do?
2. Personal responsibility: Do you need frequent reminders to get things done, or are you off and running on your own?
3. Reliable internet access to a computer that plays audio: Can you get to a computer with internet access at least twice a week? Is it a computer that plays audio?

What you get:

- $100 per month ($25 per review)
- Recognition on the Youth EB homepage (<http://generation.prx.org/yeb>)
- Satisfaction, fun and the discovery of new stories
- Training on how to write reviews that are supportive and kind, but also honest and helpful (better listening and producing skills)
- Knowing you're making youth-produced radio bigger (reaching more people) and better (improved by your feedback)
